ALBANY, Sept. 11.

By noon Tweddle Hall was crowded with delegates and spectators. The hall and stage were decorated with flags. Soon after 12 o'clock the Convention was called to order by Peter Coggersly, of the State Committee, on whose motion, by instruction of the State Committee, Sanford Church, of Orleans, was chosen temporary chairman. On being conducted to the chair, Mr. Church addressed the assembly. In the course of his remarks he said:

standing in the "foes of the Constitution" and by the side of that noble patriot and statesman A. Johnson [cheers, waving of hats, &c.], under the protection of the old flag, with not a star dimmed or perilled [cheers] and with the motto of equal rights and protection for all, we cannot fail to appeal with success to the people whose every interest is centered in the success of our cause. [Cheers.]

The roll of delegates was then called and it appeared that the several county delegates were full. From Schuyler and Richmond there were double delegates between Democrats and Conservative rep-

Whereas, Dean Richmond, an acknowledged leader of his party, and an eminent and patriotic citizen, has, by the mysterious providence of God, been suddenly removed from among us, it is fit that suitable expression be made of our grief for our loss and respect for his character; therefore,

Resolved, That the members of this Convention and the great party which

Resolved, That the great abilities of the lamented deceased; his sagacity as a public counsellor; his spirit, enterprise and benevolence as a citizen; his worth as a man; his fidelity as a friend; his fervent patriotism and true attachments to the Constitution and the Union will deservedly secure for him the lasting memory and esteem of the whole people.

his grief and solicitude, it is by the circumstances of the hour rendered still more afflictive and the anxiety which even in his last hours and amidst the premonitory pains of death he expressed for the public good calls upon us for increased exertions in the maintenance of that Constitution and Union whose cause he ever espoused.

Resolved, That this Convention tender to the suffering members of his family, the unanimous assurance of its deep and sincere sympathy in their affliction, and that the Secretary be directed to transmit to engrossed, and that he caused them to be published in the Argus, and other papers of this State, which was the especial scenes of his patriotic labors, are requested to publish the same.

On motion of T. B. Carroll, Gen. Tilden of New York, was unanimously invited to address the convention on the subject of the resolutions. Mr. Tilden appeared on the stage and elicited loud applause and spoke at considerable length upon the character of the deceased and reviewing the great issues before the country in which he said Mr. Richmond felt so deeply interested. The resolutions were adopted.

The Convention took a recess until 4 P. M.

On the re-assembling of the Convention Mr. Shafer, of Albany, moved that the Convention adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The question was put and the President declared the motion carried.

Cheers were then called for and given for John Hoffman. Cheers were given for Henry I. Murphy and Gen. Dix. Considerable confusion followed, delegates protesting that it was wrong to keep the Ira Shafer began loudly called for too the stage, and addressed the audience briefly. He said he had been directed by the Committee on Resolutions to inform the Convention that the committee would not be prepared to report until to-morrow and this being the case, he thought the Convention did wise in adjourning over.

His remarks were received with warm approval, and at their close the delegates and spectators left the hall.
